

SPEAKING ENGAGEMENTS

KATHERINE GOLDSTEIN is on a mission to make society more equitable for moms and caregivers.

She's held leadership positions as an editor and digital strategist at HuffPost, Slate and Condé Nast. As a Harvard Nieman Journalism fellow, she turned her eye toward the social and economic forces that make motherhood in America so difficult.

Her research and reporting is supported by The Ford Foundation, The Better Life Lab at New America, and The Economic Hardship Reporting Project. She's been an instructor at The Harvard Extension School and her work has been republished by Oxford University Press.

The ideas she brings to her speeches on gender equity & moms and caregivers at work have been published in the NYTimes, TIME, WashPost, Vox, the Guardian and more.

Her speaking includes thought provoking keynotes and workshops for all-company gatherings, corporate leadership and management groups, and ERGs.

Her signature speech is Our Job to Care: Bold ideas and Concrete Solutions for Moms & Caregivers at Work

Additional Speaking Topics include:

- 🌱 Reach your Gender Equity Goals: Understanding new realities for managers and leaders
- 🌙 Moms Can't Do it All: Why personal problems need systemic solutions
- 🔴 Thinking Past the Perks: Supporting visionary corporate culture with measurable results
